Direct or Indirect Which is right for your business?

Many companies count on their Channel Partners to maximise their revenues, help them increase penetration into other geographical markets or alternative business sectors, to raise their profile and promote their brand, and achieve high levels of recognition and customer satisfaction.

Sounds like quite a tall order? Sounds like a big risk? It is – and there is no guarantee of success when embarking on a Partner Recruitment drive, particularly if this is your first indirect selling venture. Your reputation is potentially at risk and the planning, research and selection phases are as crucial to your program as the correct Partner Management procedures further down the line.
